GOVERNMENT LABOR

Some time ago the Dominion government established a labor bureau with the avowed intention of doing all in their power to keep the balance free between the capitalist and the worker. In connection with the department a labor gazette is published and special stress is laid upon the fact that good and fair wages are paid to laborers working at public works. Not even the most blindest Tory in the country could complain about the government doing everything possible to ameliorate the condition of the working man. As a general rule, however, the position of the manual laborer in Canada is fairly tolerable. Good wages are paid in most parts of the country, and there seems to be little difficulty in obtaining permanent employment. There is another class of laborer, however, who suffers greater hardships, and who in many instances receives less pay than the man who earns his livelihood by the sweat of his brow, namely, under clerks and men performing duties requiring as a rule a good deal more intelligence than has to be displayed by the day laborer. The employees of the Winnipeg post office who belong to the latter class, have recently gone on strike, as they claim that while they work to the maximum of their endurance, they are hardly able to earn a bare living. It is a ridiculous anomaly for a government which runs a labor bureau for the amelioration of the laboring classes, to overlook and practically starve men in other branches of the public service. If anything is done at all in the interests of labor, they should be no invidious class distinctions.

TARDY RECOGNITION

The government of Canada has at last taken steps to atone in a small measure for their mean spirited and ungenerous treatment of Colonel Hetherington. The apprehensive part of the general order referring to the retirement of Colonel Hetherington is excused, and the following is substituted: "Lieutenant Colonel L. Hetherington is placed on the retired list, and in recognition of his services in South Africa, is granted the honorary title of colonel." It is not until a government cancels an edict which has already gone into effect, and their action in this case is nothing more or less than an admission that Colonel Hetherington's retirement from the mounted police was ill advised and hasty.

Some of the doctores who attended President McKinley are of the opinion he was shot with a poisoned bullet.

Three times in a short generation has a president of the United States been laid low by an assassin. In 1865 Lincoln, after weathering the storms of the war time, was stricken just as peace seemed to promise a happy ending to his arduous work. In 1901 Garfield perished by the hand of a benevolent political fanatic. Now McKinley is the victim of a crime for which no cause can be suggested. Doomed men who do not think every work so serious as the present that tyranny justifies strong measures by the sovereign, the assassinations that have marked the history of other lands. No one can fers from the treasury of the head of the United States government. That so many of such heads have been assassinated shows that murdering a ruler is no evidence of his badness, and that innocence is no defence against the murderer's bullet.

Don't Marry.

Almost everybody remembers the celebrated advice of the London Puck. "Be those about to marry, Don't." There is in that advice the expression of the feeling of many a mother who says, "I hope my daughter will never marry and suffer as I have."

In ninety-eight cases in every hundred there's no good for this suffering. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which cause misery. It cures excruciating dreads, neuralgia, dizziness, headache, indigestion, and nervousness. It cures female weakness. It invigorates the system, transpires the nervous and gives the mother strength to give her children.

Do not allow an unprincipled dealer to sell you something in place of "Favorite Prescription," should be "first as good."

If you are pleased with our advertisement, I will be glad to send you a bottle of "Favorite Prescription" free of charge. It will show you how much we care for our customers. It will show you how much we care for our customers. It will show you how much we care for our customers.

Other makers say their brands of Catarrh Cure are "equal to 'Queen's Head'." If so, why do they advertise us?

Experience has proved that no other is quite as good, either for writing or reading.

Your jobber will supply "Queen's Head" if you insist upon having it.

No one can tell the tale of Mr. McKeen, the great English specialist, because for the fact that Catarrh is the most serious of diseases. In fact, deafness is simply another symptom of catarrh. The catarrh germ spreads from the throat to the tubes connecting with the ears, blocking up those passages with the inflammatory discharge and rendering the action of the air drum, Japanese Catarrh Cure, in cutting deafness first, kills the catarrh germ wherever it has found lodgment. In the nose, throat or ear tubes. Then, by the use of the discharge, open up the ear tubes, open up the hearing. The only remedy also to reach the inner tube, the only remedy for catarrh deafness and for all forms of catarrh whatever is Japanese Catarrh Cure.

"For years I had been troubled with catarrh, which affected my hearing. For five years I could not hear a word. I tried many remedies fruitlessly in search of a cure, but received no permanent benefit until I used Japanese Catarrh Cure. After I had used the second bottle my hearing gradually got better. I continued until I had used five bottles, which has resulted in completely curing every trace of catarrh and restoring my hearing. I feel very grateful for the wonderful benefit received from Japanese Catarrh Cure as it has set me free from the terrible sufferings of catarrh. I have found it to be a most reliable remedy. I have found it to be a most reliable remedy. I have found it to be a most reliable remedy."

WEST POINT CADETS.

FRANKS WHEN THE UPPER CLASS MEN PLAY ON THE PLEBS.

Traditions and Precedents Which Must Be Faithfully Observed by the Recruits at Their New Military Academy.

There is probably no place in the Great States where traditions and precedents have been so much valued as they have at West Point. These traditions are carefully preserved and handed down from one class to another, and it is of the most important nature for a cadet to do anything that is contrary to them. It does violate an important one, the custom in question is made to feel the discipline of the corps in an unmistakable manner.

Such a tradition is that a "pilot," as members of the fourth class are called, is never mentioned on an equal footing with an upper class man until he has completed his first year at the academy. He is invariably addressed as Mr. [Name] and not plain Mr. and must always address upper class men in the same formal manner, and, in addition, he must be polite in his use of the word "sir," offering it to the end of every sentence.

It is a pilot is asked by an upper class man what his name is, he must reply "Mr. Brown, sir," or whatever his name may be, and if he fails to do so he is certain to be told to "put a 'sir' before Mr.," in a way that will usually cause him to remember it. If, on the other hand, he soon learns this, and there is no longer any trouble with him that is his usual way.

An amusing anecdote is told of a new recruit who, when reported to West Point a few years ago concerning this use of the word "sir." When the new cadet reported at the academy, the first thing the adjutant's office, where they deposit their credentials and give instructions concerning their parents or guardians and their former career. Next day the treasurer's office and deposit what money they may have with them, and then they go to the barracks, where they report to the cadet officer and receive their instructions. It is here that they receive their first taste of military discipline. With the cadets, who come through the preliminary, easily made the barracks, and after a few days' temper to enter the office in a military manner and to the satisfaction of the senior lieutenant in charge he was asked by that functionary what his name was.

"John Smith," answered the recruit. "Suppose you put a 'sir' on that," said the cadet officer, forgetting for the moment in his excited way that he was the senior cadet of the "Mr. John Smith," immediately replied the pilot, and supposed he had just given the letter his superior's instructions. For the next few minutes that poor pilot was a bundle to him, but after a few days about the time he was being taught to be a cadet, the senior "John Smith" came to him and said, "You are a pilot," and he was told to put "sir" on his name.

It has been the custom in the corps from time immemorial to "pilot" pilots during their first year, and even now many of the traditions included in an instruction manual and which are followed by a pilot or an expedition from the authorities.

An incident illustrative of this is told by an officer who was with the first year of Company I's first on their first day of the commencement of their first year at West Point. He built a view from the first of the academy's buildings, the "Academy House." "I saw the 'John Smith' who was a pilot, and he was a bundle to him, but after a few days about the time he was being taught to be a cadet, the senior "John Smith" came to him and said, "You are a pilot," and he was told to put "sir" on his name.

The officer, perceiving that the whole thing was just an innocent form of devilment contrived by some ingenious young man, made no report of it, but went on his way.

Another amusing incident of this kind occurred one quiet Sunday afternoon, when most of the cadets were going in their tents and the winter tents to front of the camp, many were heard to be talking to one another, saying, "John, I saw the 'John Smith' who was a pilot, and he was a bundle to him, but after a few days about the time he was being taught to be a cadet, the senior "John Smith" came to him and said, "You are a pilot," and he was told to put "sir" on his name.

A pilot's first visit to the academy is a most important one for him, for he is the official representative of the corps and his conduct is watched by all. It is therefore of the utmost importance that he should be in the best of his condition, and that he should be able to give a good account of himself.

As the pilot's first visit to the academy is a most important one for him, it is therefore of the utmost importance that he should be in the best of his condition, and that he should be able to give a good account of himself.

Free Press: E. Booth, for a time a resident of Edmonton, was killed at Walla Walla, Wash., on the 22nd of August. Booth was a Canadian. He was caught in a forest fire. His companion, by making a detour, escaped, but Mr. Booth, who was a cripple, was unable to get away. The mountain side was a series of steep cliffs and in trying to get up through the flames Mr. Booth slipped and fell over a cliff containing in his hand a tin of matches. He was killed. Booth came to his death from a fire which broke out in the forest, and spent a winter at Great Falls, Idaho.

Two or three complaints have been made to the Herald regarding the injudicious use of the arms and tridents by the game warden in the park. A sportsman is reported to have fired on a pair of prairie chickens right to the very door of a ranch house and their first big gun that at the birds or that some of the shot actually struck the dwelling house. Such trifling is neither gentlemen or sportsmanlike and should be stopped. It is said that although many ranches and farmers are most generous in allowing birds to be shot on their place, they have the right to prevent any shooting whatever on their property.
